Course Overview: This course focuses on the way law regulates companies and the facilities company law offers, such as limited liability and transferability of shares – as well as the corresponding burdens (duties of disclosure, compliance with statutory procedures and common law duties) and the dynamics of the often tense relationship between shareholders and management.

Who should take this course?

- Entrepreneurs, business owners and corporate professionals such as bankers and insurance executives.
- Anyone involved in or aspiring to become involved in business formation, management or advisory roles.
- Anyone seeking to enhance their knowledge of company law and partnerships.
